ARE YOU AN INTERNET ADDICT?

Experts say that millions of people around the world are one click away from “online“ addiction.

The Internet is where we spend more and more of our time. But for a growing number of people it is an out-of-control habit that interferes with normal living and causes severe stress on family, friends, loved ones and work.

Kimberley Young, clinical director of the Centre for Internet Addiction Recovery and author of the book Caught in the Net, says that about 5% to 20% of Americans may suffer from Internet addiction and the problem may be even greater in countries like China, Korea and Taiwan. It is a global problem.

Coleen Moore, a doctor at the Illinois Institute for Addiction Recovery, says she has clients from school age to early adulthood who spend 14 to 18 hours a day online. But Young notes that it is not just how long people spend using a computer, it is what they are doing online.

To help people with their diagnosis, Young developed a test that uses a 20-question survey to measure levels of Internet addiction. “There are no real drugs for this yet,“ she says. “It is not about medication, it is more about therapy.“ The recovery time is not the same. Some patients need to go to 90 days of in-patient treatment, followed by a continuing care program. Internet addiction requires lifelong treatment, experts say.

Online gaming is the form of internet addiction most rapidly growing among young people. They are addicted to surfing the Web, chat rooms, virtual communities and things like that.

“Gaming is certainly one of the things that could get people addicted to the Internet, because it has such compelling content. But I do not think games are any more likely to cause Internet addiction than any other forms of entertainment,” Moore says.
